President George H.W. Bush speaks during a news conference in the White House briefing room in Washington.

George H.W. Bush and his associates had a profound effect in shaping a power equation — mostly in ways they sought to obscure — that protected and advanced their interests.

When Joseph McBride came upon the document about George H. W. Bush's double life, he was not looking for it. It was 1985, and McBride, a former Daily Variety writer, was in the library of California State University San Bernardino, researching a book about the movie director Frank Capra. Like many good reporters, McBride took off on a "slight," if time-consuming, tangent — spending day after day poring over reels of microfilmed documents related to the FBI and the JFK assassination. McBride had been a volunteer on Kennedy's campaign, and since 1963 had been intrigued by the unanswered questions surrounding that most singular of American tragedies.

A particular memo caught his eye, and he leaned in for a closer look. Practically jumping off the screen was a memorandum from FBI director J. Edgar Hoover, dated November 29, 1963. Under the subject heading "Assassination of President John F. Kennedy," Hoover reported that, on the day after JFK's murder, the bureau had provided two individuals with briefings. One was "Captain William Edwards of the Defense Intelligence Agency." The other: "Mr. George Bush of the Central Intelligence Agency."

[We have been] advised that the Department of State feels some misguided anti-Castro group might capitalize on the present situation and undertake an unauthorized raid against Cuba, believing that the assassination of President John F. Kennedy might herald a change in U.S. policy… [Our] sources know of no [such] plans… The substance of the foregoing information was orally furnished to Mr. George Bush of the Central Intelligence Agency and Captain William Edwards of the Defense Intelligence Agency.

McBride shook his head. George H. W. Bush? In the CIA in 1963? Dealing with Cubans and the JFK assassination? Could this be the same man who was now vice president of the United States? Even when Bush was named CIA director in 1976 amid much agency-bashing, his primary asset had been the fact that he was not a part of the agency during the coups, attempted coups, and murder plots in Iran, Cuba, Chile, and other hot spots about which embarrassing information was being disclosed every day in Senate hearings.

For CIA director Bush, there had been much damage to control. The decade from 1963 to 1973 had seen one confidence-shaking crisis after another. There was the Kennedy assassination and the dubious accounting of it by the Warren Commission. Then came the revelations of how the CIA had used private foundations to channel funds to organizations inside the United States, such as the National Student Association. Then came Watergate, with its penumbra of CIA operatives such as E. Howard Hunt and their shadowy misdoings. Americans were getting the sense of a kind of sanctioned underground organization, operating outside the law and yet protected by it. Then President Gerald Ford, who had ascended to that office when Richard Nixon resigned, fired William Colby, the director of the CIA, who was perceived by hard-liners as too accommodating to congressional investigators and would-be intelligence reformers.

Now Ford had named George H. W. Bush to take over the CIA. But Bush seemed wholly unqualified for such a position — especially at a time when the agency was under maximum scrutiny. He had been UN ambassador, Republican National Committee chairman, and the US envoy to Beijing, where both Nixon and Henry Kissinger had regarded him as a lightweight and worked around him. What experience did he have in the world of intelligence and spying? How would he restore public confidence in a tarnished spy agency? No one seemed to know. Or did Gerald Ford realize something most others didn’t?

Bush served at the CIA for one year, from early 1976 to early 1977. He worked quietly to reverse the Watergate-era reforms of CIA practices, moving as many operations as possible offshore and beyond accountability. Although a short stint, it nevertheless created an image problem in 1980 when Bush ran unsuccessfully for the Republican presidential nomination against former California governor Ronald Reagan. Some critics warned of the dangerous precedent in elevating someone who had led the CIA, with its legacy of dark secrets and covert plots, blackmail and murder, to preside over the United States government.

"Must be another George Bush"

In 1985, when McBride found the FBI memo apparently relating to Bush’s past, the reporter did not immediately follow up this curious lead. Bush was now a recently reelected vice president (a famously powerless position), and McBride himself was busy with other things. By 1988, however, the true identity of “Mr. George Bush of the CIA” took on new meaning, as George H. W. Bush prepared to assume his role as Reagan’s heir to the presidency. Joe McBride decided to make the leap from entertainment reportage to politics. He picked up the phone and called the White House.

“May I speak with the vice president?” he asked

McBride had to settle for Stephen Hart, a vice presidential spokesman. Hart denied that his boss had been the man mentioned in the memo, quoting Bush directly. “I was in Houston, Texas, at the time and involved in the independent oil drilling business. And I was running for the Senate in late ’63. I don’t have any idea of what he’s talking about.” Hart concluded with this suggestion: “Must be another George Bush.” McBride found the response troubling — rather detailed for a ritual non-denial. It almost felt like a cover story that Bush was a bit too eager to trot out. He returned to Hart with more questions for Bush:

Did you do any work with or for the CIA prior to the time you became its director?

If so, what was the nature of your relationship with the agency, and how long did it last?

Did you receive a briefing by a member of the FBI on anti-Castro Cuban activities in the aftermath [of] the assassination of President Kennedy?

Within half an hour, Hart called him back. The spokesman now declared that, though he had not spoken with Bush, he would nevertheless answer the questions himself. Hart said that the answer to the first question was no, and, therefore, the other two were moot.

Undeterred, McBride called the CIA. A spokesman for the agency, Bill Devine, responded: “This is the first time I’ve ever heard this . . . I’ll see what I can find out and call you back.”

The following day, the PR man was tersely formal and opaque: “I can neither confirm nor deny.” It was the standard response the agency gave when it dealt with its sources and methods. Could the agency reveal whether there had been another George Bush in the CIA? Devine replied: “Twenty-seven years ago? I doubt that very much. In any event, we have a standard policy of not confirming that anyone is involved in the CIA.”

"Apparently" George William Bush

But it appears this standard policy was made to be broken. McBride’s revelations appeared in the July 16, 1988, issue of the liberal magazine the Nation, under the headline “The Man Who Wasn’t There, ‘George Bush,’ C.I.A. Operative.” Shortly thereafter, CIA spokeswoman Sharron Basso told the Associated Press that the CIA believed that “the record should be clarified.” She said that the FBI document “apparently” referred to a George William Bush who had worked in 1963 on the night shift at the Langley, Virginia, headquarters, and that “would have been the appropriate place to have received such an FBI report.” George William Bush, she said, had left the CIA in 1964 to join the Defense Intelligence Agency.

Certainly, the article caused George H. W. Bush no major headaches. By the following month, he was triumphantly accepting the GOP’s presidential nomination at its New Orleans convention, unencumbered by tough questions about his past.

Meanwhile, the CIA’s Basso told reporters that the agency had been unable to locate the “other” George Bush. The assertion was reported by several news outlets, with no comment about the irony of a vaunted intelligence agency — with a staff of thousands and a budget of billions — being unable to locate a former employee within American borders.

Perhaps what the CIA really needed was someone like Joseph McBride. Though not an investigative journalist, McBride had no trouble finding George William Bush. Not only was the man findable; he was still on the US government payroll. By 1988 this George Bush was working as a claims representative for the Social Security Administration. He explained to McBride that he had worked only briefly at the CIA, as a GS-5 probationary civil servant, analyzing documents and photos during the night shift. Moreover, he said, he had never received interagency briefings.

Several years later, in 1991, former Texas Observer editor David Armstrong would track down the other person listed on the Hoover memo, Captain William Edwards. Edwards could confirm that he had been on duty at the Defense Intelligence Agency the day in question. He said he did not remember this briefing, but that he found the memo plausible in reference to a briefing he might have received over the phone while at his desk. While he said he had no idea who the George Bush was who also was briefed, Edward's rank and experience was certainly far above that of the night clerk George William Bush.

Shortly after McBride's article appeared in the Nation, the magazine ran a follow-up op-ed, in which the author provided evidence that the Central Intelligence Agency had foisted a lie on the American people. The piece appeared while everyone else was focusing on Bush's coronation at the Louisiana Superdome. As with McBride's previous story, this disclosure was greeted with the equivalent of a collective media yawn. An opportunity was bungled, not only to learn about the true history of the man who would be president, but also to recognize the "George William Bush" diversion for what it was: one in a long series of calculated distractions and disinformation episodes that run through the Bush family history.

With the election only two months away, and a growing sense of urgency in some quarters, George William Bush acknowledged under oath — as part of a deposition in a lawsuit brought by a nonprofit group seeking records on Bush's past — that he was the junior officer on a three- to four-man watch shift at CIA headquarters between September 1963 and February 1964, which was on duty when Kennedy was shot. "I do not recognize the contents of the memorandum as information furnished to me orally or otherwise during the time I was at the CIA," he said. "In fact, during my time at the CIA, I did not receive any oral communications from any government agency of any nature whatsoever. I did not receive any information relating to the Kennedy assassination during my time at the CIA from the FBI. Based on the above, it is my conclusion that I am not the Mr. George Bush of the Central Intelligence Agency referred to in the memorandum." . . .

George H.W. Bush: Spy from the age of 18

Almost a decade would pass between Bush's election in 1988 and the declassification and release in 1996 of another government document that shed further light on the matter. This declassified document would help to answer some of the questions raised by the '63 Hoover memo — questions such as, "If George Herbert Walker Bush was already connected with the CIA in 1963, how far back did the relationship go?"

But yet another decade would pass before this second document would be found, read, and revealed to the public. Fast-forward to December 2006, on a day when JFK researcher Jerry Shinley sat, as he did on so many days, glued to his computer, browsing through the digitized database of documents on the Web site of the Mary Ferrell Foundation.

On that December day, Shinley came upon an internal CIA memo that mentioned George H. W. Bush [the Bush designated Director of Central Intelligence (DCI)]. Dated November 29, 1975, it reported, in typically spare terms, the revelation that the man who was about to become the head of the CIA actually had prior ties to the agency. And the connection discussed here, unlike that unearthed by McBride, went back not to 1963, but to 1953 — a full decade earlier. Writing to the chief of the spy section of the analysis and espionage agency, the chief of the "cover and commercial staff" noted:

Through Mr. Gale Allen . . . I learned that Mr. George Bush, DCI designate has prior knowledge of the now terminated project WUBRINY/LPDICTUM which was involved in proprietary commercial operations in Europe. He became aware of this project through Mr. Thomas J. Devine, a former CIA Staff Employee and later, oil-wildcatting associate with Mr. Bush. Their joint activities culminated in the establishment of Zapata Oil [sic] [in 1953] which they eventually sold. After the sale of Zapata Oil, Mr. Bush went into politics, and Mr. Devine became a member of the investment firm of Train, Cabot and Associates, New York . . . The attached memorandum describes the close relationship between Messrs. Devine and Bush in 1967-1968 which, according to Mr. Allen, continued while Mr. Bush was our ambassador to the United Nations.

In typical fashion for the highly compartmentalized and secretive intelligence organization, the memo did not make clear how Bush knew Devine, or whether Devine was simply dropping out of the spy business to become a true entrepreneur.

For Devine, who would have been about twenty-seven years old at the time, to “resign” at such a young age, so soon after the CIA had spent a great deal of time and money training him was, at minimum, highly unusual. It would turn out, however, that Devine had a special relationship allowing him to come and go from the agency, enabling him to do other things without really leaving its employ. In fact, CIA history is littered with instances where CIA officers have tendered their “resignation” as a means of creating deniability while continuing to work closely with the agency . . .

Devine’s role in setting up Zapata would remain hidden for more than a decade — until 1965. At that point, as Bush was extricating himself from business to devote his energies to pursuing a congressional seat, Devine’s name suddenly surfaced as a member of the board of Bush’s spin-off company, Zapata Offshore — almost as if it was his function to keep the operation running. To be sure, he and Bush remained joined at the hip . . .

Devine, like the senior George Bush, is now in his eighties and still active in business in New York. When I reached him in the winter of 2007 and told him about recently uncovered CIA memos that related both his agency connections and his longtime ties to Bush, he uttered a dry chuckle, then continued cautiously.

“Tell me who you are working with in the family,” he asked when I informed him I was working on a book about the Bushes. I explained that the book was not exactly an “authorized” biography, and therefore I was not “working” with someone in the family. Moreover, I noted, the Bushes were not known for their responsiveness to journalistic inquiries. “The family policy has been as long as George has been in office, they don’t talk to media,” Devine replied. But he agreed to contact the Bush family seeking clearance. “Well, the answer is, I will inquire. I have your telephone number, and I’ll call you back when I’ve enquired.”

Surprisingly enough, he did call again, two weeks later, having checked in with his old friend in Houston. He explained that he had been told by former president George H.W. Bush not to cooperate. When I spoke to him several months later, he still would not talk about anything — though he did complain that, thanks to an article I had written about him for the Real News Project (www.realnews.org), he was now listed in Wikipedia. And then he did offer a few words:

"The Game"

Thomas Devine: I just broke one of the first rules in this game.

Russ Baker: And what is that?

Thomas Devine: Do not complain.

In fact, Devine had little to complain about. At the time, although I was aware that he seemed to be confirming that he himself had been in the “game,” I did not understand the full extent of his activities in conjunction with Bush. Nor did I understand the heightened significance of their relationship during the tumultuous event of 1963.

No business like the spy business

Before there was an Office of Strategic Services (July 1942-October 1945) or a Central Intelligence Agency (founded in 1947), corporations and attorneys who represented international businesses often employed associates in their firms as private agents to gather data on competitors and business opportunities abroad. So it was only to be expected that many of the first OSS recruits were taken from the ranks of oil companies, Wall Street banking firms, and Ivy League universities and often equated the interests of their high-powered business partners with the national interest. Such relationships like the one between George H. W. Bush and Thomas Devine thus made perfect sense to the CIA . . .

By the time George H. W. Bush founded his own company, Zapata Petroleum, it was not difficult to line up backers with long-standing ties to industrial espionage activities. The setup with Devine in the oil business provided Bush with a perfect cover to travel abroad and . . . identify potential CIA recruits among foreign nationals . . .

“Poppy” Bush’s own role with intelligence appears to date back as early as the Second World War, when he joined the Navy at age eighteen. On arrival at his training base in Norfolk, Virginia, in the fall of 1942, Bush was trained not only as a pilot of a torpedo bomber but also as a photographic officer, responsible for crucial, highly sensitive aerial surveillance . . .

After mastering the technique of operating the handheld K-20 aerial camera and film processing, Bush recruited and trained other pilots and crewmen. His own flight team became part bomber unit, part spy unit. The information they obtained about the Japanese navy, as well as crucial intelligence on Japanese land-based defenses, was forwarded to the US Navy's intelligence center at Pearl Harbor and to the Marine Corps for use in planning amphibious landings in order to reduce casualties.

The so-called Operation Snapshot was so hush-hush that, under naval regulations in effect at the time, even revealing its name would lead to court-martial. According to a book by Robert Stinnett, a fellow flier, Admiral Marc Mitscher hit the "bulkhead" when he saw that Bush's team had filed a report in which they actually referred by name to their top-secret project. The three people above Bush in his command chain were made to take razor blades to the pages of the report and remove the forbidden language.

The lesson was apparently not lost on Bush. From that moment forward, as every Bush researcher has learned, Bush's life would honor the principle: no names, no paper trail, no fingerprints. If you wanted to know what Bush had done, you had to have the patience of a sleuth yourself.

photos of Skull and Bones rituals

Skull and Bones is a cult that members enter into at the age of 21 and a cult which they work within for the rest of their lives. They conspire and use their authorities to engineer wars and dumb down the American people, e.g. through an intentionally degraded public education system. (Leaving good education for only the super rich; they have created a Prussian society (no middle class) in America.)

The mistake most Americans make is to assume these elites have the best interests of America at heart and when they make decisions which are bad for America, most of us assume they just messed up or are stupid. That's what they want you to think. For Example, many people thing George W. Bush is not very bright and that explains why he thought Iraq had WMDs. That's simply not true. W. has always been exceptionally bright. He graduated from Yale majoring in History and then went on to get an MBA at Harvard; all without studying very hard. How many other people do you know who are smart enough to have done that? Its much more reasonable to believe that he was well aware that Iraq posed no threat to the USA and that he had other reasons for invading Iraq.

Reasons which he chose not to share with us, the American people. Why would he not tell the American people the real reasons and present a false, contrived explanation? Usually when someone hides the truth of their motives its because their motives are not acceptable or in the best interests of those whom they are hiding it from.

His reasons certainly had nothing to do with the best interests of the American people and certainly not the best interests of the 4,000 American troops he sent to their death in Iraq. He is personally responsible for more Americans being killed than the bastards who attacked us on 9/11.

Yet he was re-elected to a second term as President and today, in 2020, he is admired by many Americans and respected by almost all Americans.

No, George W. Bush is not stupid or someone who makes stupid mistakes in judgment.
Quite the opposite is what the facts indicate.

• Explosive growth in Afghan opium production is being driven by the shared interests of traditional traffickers and the Taliban. And as with so many of these cross-national issues, Mr. Chairman, what concerns me most is the way the threats become intertwined. In this case, there is ample evidence that Islamic extremists such as Usama Bin Ladin use profits from the drug trade to support their terror campaign.

Bush Will Not Stop Afghan Opium Trade

Charles R. Smith
Thursday, March 28, 2002

The Bush administration has decided not to destroy the opium crop in Afghanistan. President Bush, who previously linked the Afghan drug trade directly to terrorism, has now decided not to destroy the Afghan opium crop.

"The war in Afghanistan will be decided within the next six weeks based on whether or not the poppy crops go to market," stated a U.S. intelligence official who recently returned from Afghanistan.

The source, who requested that he not be identified, noted that the opium poppy fields are blooming and ready for harvest. U.S. forces could destroy the crops using aerial spraying techniques, but no such actions are planned.

"If the estimated 3,000 tons of opium reaches market, it will lead to a new upsurge in international terrorism and a great loss in international credibility for the Bush administration and the United States' ability to conduct war in the 21st century. America's enemies throughout the world from China to North Korea to Iran will be emboldened by this lack of strategic vision and political will," said the source.

Kerry, as past Chairman of the U.S.A.'s Foreign Relations Committee and Secretary of State, is still meddling in U.S.A's foreign policies; policies such as allowing afghan opium production to skyrocket from 135 tons in 2001 (before our forces went in) to 9,000 tons in 2017 (source UNODC). Every western intelligence service is on the record stating that afghan opium trafficking is the primary source of funding for both al-Queda and the Taliban, meaning that John Kerry is facilitating the flow of billions of dollars to America's enemies; money which is used for the weapons and bombs which kill and injure American troops and launch attacks like 9/11. This is only the most recent way that Skull and Bones cult members finance America's (and Israel's) enemies to perpetuate wars (for a war to continue, the enemy needs a steady source of funding). Every thinking person knows those wide open opium fields could be plowed up,burned up, or blown up; or at least the opium could be bought up; but Kerry and his Pentagon people ordered that none of those 4 actions are to be taken. Why would these traitors want to perpetuate wars? Because they profit from them and the wars move the world ever closer to a centralized New World Order which they will control much like the way the people of China are controlled by a small central committee.

The CIA, the DEA, U.S. Generals and members of the U.S. Congress are all on record as saying that this very same opium growing freely in the wide open opium fields of Afghanistan is the number one source of financing for al-Queda and the Taliban.

So, either

A: all of our politicians and media have been lieing to us over the past 20 years about who the "Terrorists" are, or

B: the politicians who have been allowing the Afghan opium to freely grow and finance the terrorists over the past 20 years are guilty of High Treason and should be locked up forthwith.

I choose option B; don't you? !

According to the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime, in 2017 Afghanistan produced 9,000 metric tonnes of opium, 92% of the entire world's supply. In 2001, before U.S. led troops went into Afghanistan, Afghanistan's production was 185 metric tonnes. No, these are not typos, since NATO went into Afghanistan, Afghan opium production, the primary financing vehicle for both al-Queda and the Taliban, has increased 50 fold (5,000%).

Its not rocket science. NATO could easily stop that dope from reaching our enemies. NATO could buy it up, plow it up,burn it up, or blow it up. Or U.S. forces could spray the opium fields with herbicide just as they spray the coca fields in South America.
But NATO policy is to leave it alone. And who determines NATO policy? A handful of American politicians, led by Skull and Bones cult members like the Chairman of the U.S. Foreign Relations Committee, John Kerry. This book provides factual information to you that you have likely never been shown before; even if you are an avid reader of U.S. News articles and/or a Fox or CNN News watcher.

The reason you have never read about these facts before is that American news media has, over the past 2 decades, become primarily a provider of sound bites, entertainment, and spoon-fed government sourced propaganda suitable for people with a child's level of intellect or education. When U.S. media has covered this story, it has been very superficially and without any comprehensive analysis.

Who's Been In Charge for the Past 20 Years?

A tiny handful of U.S. politicans like George W. Bush and John Kerry; the ones who control U.S. foreign policy and the ones who control U.S. military operations (which includes NATO).

Don't blame the Pentagon or U.S. Generals. They are all subordinate to the wishes of the President and U.S. Foreign Relations Policy (set by the Foreign Relations Committee and the Secretaries of State and Defence)

NATO's 2 Supreme Allied Commanders are always U.S. Generals (this actually makes sense because America contributes more money and troops to NATO operations than all the other countries combined). They are responsible to U.S. politicians like John Kerry, who dictate the U.S. policy of allowing Afghanistan opium to grow freely; which is proven in spades by the 61% increase in production in 2011 from 2010.

From 2002 until 2008, it was Skull and Bones President George W. Bush who created and implemented this same "let it grow" policy.

Skull and Boners John Kerry and George W. Bush have been NATO's primary controllers over the past 20 years and have knowingly facilitated approximately 200 billion dollars of opium trafficking profits getting into the hands of the same bastards who attacked America on 9/11 and are killing and wounding our troops in Afghanistan. Those billions are the money which pays for the RPGs, bombs and other weapons that target American and other NATO troops. The Afghan Opium Debacle is the elephant in the closet that John Kerry and George W. Bush will not and would not talk about, nor allow any questions to be asked about.

On October 11th. 2011, the U.N. Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC) released their 2011 report and it shows a 61% increase in Afghan Opium Production in 2011 from 2010. 5,800 metric tonnes in 2011 and 3,600 metric tonnes in 2010.

The UNODC Afghan Opium Assessments are put out several times per year,

Afghanistan retakes heroin crown
Afghanistan retook its place as the world's leading producer of heroin last year, after US-led forces overthrew the Taleban which had banned cultivation of opium poppies.
Production has surged since the end of the Taliban regime
The finding was made in a key drug report, distributed in Kabul on Sunday by the US State Department, which supports almost identical findings by the United Nations last week.

so there is no excuse at all for U.S. Politicians, NATO or Pentagon officials to feign ignorance on this subject. In addition there have been many reports and articles written on the subject.

U.S. soldiers are ordered not to interfere with opium production in Afghanistan while knowing full well that opium pays for the weapons that are used to kill and wound their Brothers in Arms and perhaps themselves.

Our NATO troops know exactly what is going on; and they find it insulting and absurd !

Incredibly, NATO soldiers are under orders not to interfere at all with the growing and harvesting of the primary source of terrorist financing, Afghanistan opium.

There are 3 undisputed facts which prove that NATO's real controllers, like the New World Order's poster boy, Skull and Boner John Kerry, want NATO to not win in Afghanistan in order to continue and expand (into Pakistan and Iran) conflict; eventually leading to a centralized global government (New World Order) modeled after the current Chinese government.

The opium is necessary for their purposes because in order for our enemies(Taliban/al-Queda) to stay in the fight, they need a steady source of funding. And these American Traitors, (Bush, Kerry etc.),want the wars to continue and expand, eventually leading to a one world government which they and their pals (Middle East Oil Shieks, Chinese Communist Leaders, the largest Corporations) and the wealthiest 1/10th of 1% of the world's people, will control. The rest of the world's peoples will be politically and economically neutered and financially enslaved; just look at Red China (yes, they are still communist, although our constant brainwashing has made most of us forget that little fact) today. That is the exact type of society America and the rest of the world is heading towards !

FACT #1 : In 2001 Afghanistan produced 1/35, that's right, one thirty-fifth, as much opium as it did in 2009.

Afghanistan_opium_survey_2009_summary.pdf

FACT#2 : Every single western intelligence agency is on record as saying that both the Taliban and al-Queda get most of their war financing from Afghan opium trafficking. In other words, that opium provides money which pays for the bombs and bullets which kill and injure our troops as well as pays for terrorist attacks like 9/11. And this is nothing new: just look at this testimony of the CIA Director 22 years ago to the U.S. Senate; "there is ample evidence that Islamic extremists such as Usama Bin Ladin use profits from the drug trade to support their terror campaigns."

FACT#3:Anyone who does not think that NATO could keep that opium out of our enemies' hands, is truly naive;

NATO could spray it with herbicides or NATO could;

- 2: plow it up,

[Congressional Record: January 26, 2011 (House)]

HOW THE 20-YEAR WAR STARTED

The SPEAKER pro tempore. Under a previous order of the House, the gentleman from Texas (Mr. PAUL) is recognized for 5 minutes.

Mr. PAUL. Mr. Speaker, how did the 20-year war get started? It had been long assumed that the United States Government, shortly before Iraq invaded Kuwait in August of 1990, gave Saddam Hussein a green light to attack. A State Department cable recently published by WikiLeaks confirmed that U.S. Ambassador April Glaspie did indeed have a conversation with Saddam Hussein one week prior to Iraq's August 1, 1990, invasion of Kuwait. Amazingly, the released cable was entitled, "Saddam's Message of Friendship to President Bush." In it, Ambassador Glaspie affirmed to Saddam that "the President had instructed her to broaden and deepen our relations with Iraq." As Saddam Hussein outlined Iraq's ongoing border dispute with Kuwait, Ambassador Glaspie was quite clear that, "we took no position on these Arab affairs."

There would have been no reason for Saddam Hussein not to take this assurance at face value. The U.S. was quite supportive of his invasion and war of aggression against Iran in the 1980s. With this approval from the U.S. Government, it wasn't surprising that the invasion occurred. The shock and surprise was how quickly the tables were turned and our friend, Saddam Hussein, all of a sudden became Hitler personified.

The document was classified, supposedly to protect national security, yet this information in no way jeopardized our security. Instead, it served to keep the truth from the American people about an event leading up to our initial military involvement in Iraq and the region that continues to today.

The secrecy of the memo was designed to hide the truth from the American people and keep our government from being embarrassed.

This was the initial event that had led to so much death and destruction—not to mention the financial costs—these past 20 years. Our response and persistent militarism toward Iraq was directly related to 9/11, as our presence on the Arabian Peninsula—and in particular Saudi Arabia—was listed by al Qaeda as a major grievance that outraged the radicals who carried out the heinous attacks against New York and Washington on that fateful day.

Today, the conflict has spread through the Middle East and Central Asia with no end in sight.

The reason this information is so important is that if Congress and the American people had known about this green light incident 20 years ago, they would have been a lot more reluctant to give a green light to our government to pursue the current war—a war that is ongoing and expanding to this very day.

The tough question that remains is was this done deliberately to create the justification to redesign the Middle East, as many neo-conservatives desired, and to secure oil supplies for the West; or was it just a diplomatic blunder followed up by many more strategic military blunders? Regardless, we have blundered into a war that no one seems willing to end.

Julian Assange, the publisher of the WikiLeaks memo, is now considered an enemy of the state. Politicians are calling for drastic punishment and even assassination; and, sadly, the majority of the American people seem to support such moves.

But why should we so fear the truth? Why should our government's lies and mistakes be hidden from the American people in the name of patriotism? Once it becomes acceptable to equate truth with treason, we can no longer call ourselves a free society.

As President, Bush tricked/double crossed (an admired trait among the cult symbolized by the crossed bones in their logo) Saddam Husein into attacking Kuwait (Bush sent U.S. ambassador, April Glaspie to assure Saddam that the U.S. would not interfere; "We have no opinion on your Arab-Arab conflicts, such as your dispute with Kuwait" from the official transcript of Glaspie's meeting on July 25th 1990 with Saddam.)

Bush then double-crossed Saddam and engaged America in an unending, ambiguous and vague "war against terror". The following year GHW made his now infamous "New World Order" speech to congress on March 6,1991; "this new world order cannot guarantee an era of perpetual peace."

GHW's next step was to establish a large U.S. military base on Islamic holy land in Saudi Arabia, which, predictably, turned bin Laden's group into an enraged enemy of the U.S.A..

GHW Bush still demanded to see classified CIA documents; the first president to do that after leaving office. He loaded up on defence stocks BEFORE 9/11, and ON September 11,2001, GHW was actually at a meeting with Osama's brother,Salem.

WAR IN IRAQ

George W. Bush: initiated into Skull and Bones in 1968

He did not even try hard to kill bin Laden and he did everything possible to drive the American economy into the ground (thereby leading the American economy into economic dependency on globalization, which is the economic and political footprint of the New World Order) and drove the American middle class into bankruptcy and toward extinction. He also engineered the dramatic increase in terrorist financing Afghan opium production; a project which his cult brother, John Kerry, has continued.

How Skull and Bones Members Engineered Past Wars:

The American Civil War !

William Huntington Russell, the co-founder of Skull and Bones, was the primary war engineer:

William H. Russell was the chief engineer of the Civil War. Russell was also the major opium czar of the 1800s. Russell used the infamous megalomaniac, John Brown, to start the pot boiling with a phony Abolitionist mission which recruited unemployed thugs to murder,pillage and wreak mayhem from the Santa Fe Trail to Harper's Ferry, West Virginia. Russell's Skull and Bones industrialists wanted Brown to start a rebellion to overthrow the elected government of the U.S.A. and they financed all of Brown's savage attacks on innocent civilians. John Brown has long been recognized as a psychopath on the same level as Adolph Hitler yet he often went to Boston and reported directly to Russell and Russell's associates who had to approve Brown's plans and provide the vast amounts of money needed to pay the hundreds of mercenaries Brown hired. In one scene from the 1940's movie, "the Santa Fe Trail", Brown is shown at one of these meetings in Boston telling Russell directly of his plans to attack Harper's Ferry.

When Brown was caught and hung after being caught at "Harper's Ferry", Russell simply switched his financial support over to a politician he felt would serve his war engineering purposes, that was Abraham Lincoln. There is no indication that Lincoln was any more than an unknowing puppet with respect to the Civil War similar to LBJ with respect to the Vietnam War.

History has long forgotten that Jefferson Davis, Robert E. Lee and Jeb Stuart were all West Point graduates and U.S. Army officers at that time and that they as well as most other Leaders in the South planned to phase out slavery in a peaceful way that would not decimate the Southern economy, which was much more prosperous than the North at that time. But Russell wanted a war and was willing to do or say anything to make it happen. Read an excerpt of a flattering historical account of Russell's connection with John Brown: its difficult not to bust out laughing; especially when one remembers that Russell made his fortune as an opium kingpin.

"Upon the repeal of the Missouri Compromise in 1854 he (Russell) became active as one of the leaders of the movement which resulted in the organization of the Republican party. He was a strong Abolitionist and a personal friend of John Brown and in a will which Brown made, William H. Russell was named as one of the trustees. He (Russell) was the Connecticut representative on the National Kansas (anti-slavery) committee before the war, and John Brown was many times a guest at his house.... Because he (Russell) wanted justice for all men he threw himself into the anti-slavery movement with all his heart," and that he "has a high and influential place among those who made the anti-slavery sentiment of the North, and especially of New England." Congress-man Sperry wrote, " If there ever was a man who labored faithfully and efficiently for the cause of the anti-slavery party and the elec-tion of Abraham Lincoln, that man was General Russell. He put his heart and soul into the cause. Those who knew him best during the days of the anti-slavery excitement and the rebellion which fol-lowed, will admit that he had no superior in loyalty, earnestness, and devotion to the cause." Believing civil war to be inevitable, he introduced, about 1840, very thorough military drill and discipline into his school to fit every pupil to serve his country in war as well as to furnish a sound education for times of peace. In 1861, at the outbreak of the Rebellion, military instructors were so difficult to obtain that even the younger boys from his school were in de-mand at the encampment as drill instructors for the new recruits for army service. It was stated that over 300 men who had been his pupils fought in the Union Army. In 1861, at the commencement of the Civil War, Governor Buckingham relied upon William H. Rus-sell, as the man best qualified by early training and knowledge of military affairs, to organize the militia of Connecticut for army service, and first by appointment of the Governor and later by act of the Legislature he was appointed Major-General. Such was his earnestness in the prosecution of the war that, it being impossible to send his five sons into the army (as he otherwise would have done), because the oldest was only about thirteen years of age, and the youngest an infant, he hired five men to represent them in the army who otherwise would not have enlisted."

Another aspect of the civil war that few Americans know about is that Lincoln's government passed a law which provided that any Northerner of draftable age could buy his way out of the fight with $500.

Bush, South Korean President clash over Korean War

Like Tweet 0 +1 0 6 Text

ABC News' John Hendren reports from Sydney: In an awkward but polite exchange, President Bush and South Korea's President Moo Hyun Roh seemed to clash Friday over Bush's reluctance to formally end the North Korean war.

It began as a photo opportunity, with the two presidents complimenting one another and declaring progress in the six-party talks aimed at ending North Korea's nuclear program constructive. Then, things heated up. Roh (pronounced No) agreed to carry a message in an upcoming summit to North Korean leader Kim Jong Il urging him to comply with international agreements.

The exchange heated up as Roh asked the president to clarify his stance.

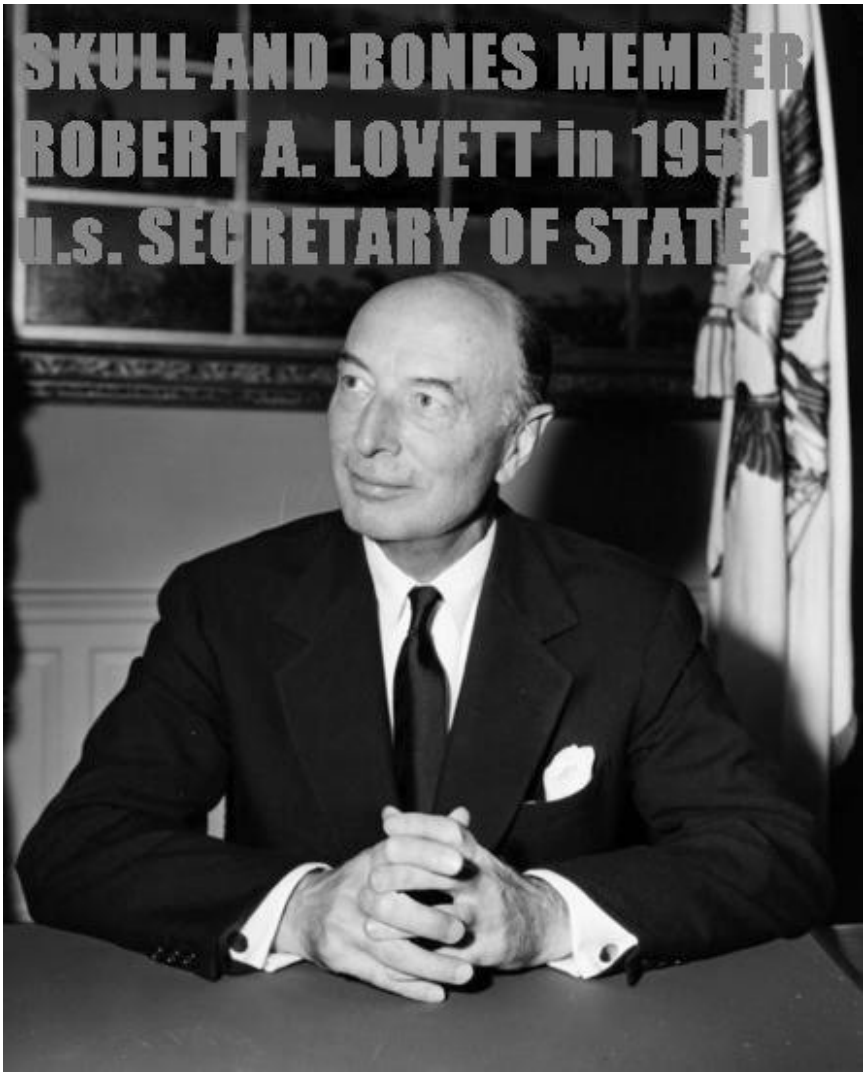
"I think I might be wrong," Roh said, through a translator. "I think I did not hear President Bush mention a declaration to end the Korean War, as of just now. Did you say so, President Bush."

Bush replied, "I said it's up to Kim Jong Il as to whether we can sign a peace treaty to end the Korean war. We've got to get rid of his weapons. ... And we're making progress toward that goal it's up to him."

Roh laughed politely and gave a broad smile as he answered "I believe that they are the same thing, Mr. President. If you could be a little clearer in your message."

President Bush gave an awkward chuckle, glanced at Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice, and, with a shake of the head, responded, "I can' make it any more clear Mr. President. ... That will happen when Kim Jong Il verifiably gets rid of his weapons programs and his weapons."

Harriman, Lovett and Bundy made sure that it was left as an "open war", which it still remains today. The Korean War was engineered and managed by members of the Skull and Bones cult from its inception and, as you can see from Bush's comments above, is kept open even against the wishes of the South Korean Government.



The Vietnam War:

This was the war engineered by tricks such as the"Gulf of Tonkin" hoax. The Skull and Boners who engineered the Vietnam War orchestrated the 1963 assasination of South Vietnamese President, Ngo Dình Diem to get the ball rolling- (see photo below)

Representing Service and Interest in the U.S. Intelligence Community

HAROLD FORD BOOK. The CIA's Center for the Study of Intelligence (CSI) has just published a new book by AFIO member and former senior CIA officer, Harold Ford. The book, CIA and the Vietnam Policymakers: Three Episodes 1962-1968. Dr Ford, one of the most respected of CIA analysts, knows his subject. He was a Naval officer in WW2, earned a PhD from the University of Chicago and joined the Agency in 1950. Later, was a postdoctoral scholar at St Antony's College, Oxford. At the Agency he served on various Vietnam working groups, was staff chief of the Office of National Estimates and also served abroad as a Chief of Station. After leaving the CIA, Ford served five years with the Church Committee and the Senate Select Committe on Intelligence. In 1980, he rejoined the CIA and helped form the new National Intelligence Council, serving as Acting Chairman before his retirement in 1986. The study shows how the pessimistic (and most times accurate) assessments of mid-level CIA analysts were softened at best and completely obscured at worst in deference to the preconceived views of the situation a seen by key Administration officials.

This looks to be an important book -- covering such intelligence controversies as the Sam Adams OB dispute, the 1968 Tet offensive, long range estimates about Vietnam, and so on. Rueters says "CIA study blasts own Vietnam-era performance" by slanting views to suit policymakers (see below).

The book is available for purchase from the National Technical Information Service (1-800-553-6847) and has been posted on CSI's web site:

CIA AND THE VIETNAM POLICYMAKERS: Three Episodes 1962-1968, by Harold P. Ford (National Technical Information Service, $44). Mr. Ford joined CIA in 1951 and held numerous high positions before retiring in 1986. His book describes policy debates with consummate skill, but does not spare CIA in his criticism, "noting particularly how some ranking agency officers skewed estimates to tell President Johnson what he wished to hear." On the other hand, DCI John McCone was not afraid to provide candid advice. When Mr. Johnson agonized over committing more combat troops, McCone argued that for them to be effective, harsh airstrikes must be carried out against far more targets in North Vietnam than LBJ approved." LBJ disagreed, and McCone was held at arms length until he resigned.(Ed Note: But for all of us who fought in that war, how right he was!)

Another most painful episode concerns the overthrow of President Ngo Dinh Diem, advocated by a cabal in the State Department led by undersecretary Averell Harriman. William Colby, then heading the clandestine services' Far East division, advocated caution. He said, the action " appears to be throwing away bird in hand before we have adequately identified birds in the bush, o songs they may sing." But the caution was disregarded, the coup proceeded, Diem was murdered, and the South Vietnamese government became a de-stabilized and de-legitimized revolving door of nobodies. (Ed. Note -- I remember how, as a mid-level analyst, I was dumbfounded by the stupidity of this proposed action when I saw the traffic authorizing it) (from book review by AFIO member Joseph Goulden, WTimes 6 June 99, p. B6) (RoyJ)
